Forecast for Wednesday 27 Oct 2021

Weather: Dry for much of the night but rain spreading across the area in the early hours, a few breaks in the rain overnight but becoming persistent and heavy by dawn. Rain continuous for much of the day with frequent heavy spells. Some localised flooding is likely and some rivers and streams are likely to become full.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: Very little chance with extensive low cloud associated with heavy rain.

Visibility: Extensive low cloud from 300m and above for most of the day, perhaps more broken and a slightly higher base for northeastern fells. Visibility below cloud will also be poor or very poor in heavy rain.
